What's your company's unique value proposition?

We help busy London professionals, athletes and active people recover from pain and injury and return confidently to work, training and everyday life through expert, hands-on physiotherapy and personalised rehabilitation. Unlike generic private clinics or long NHS waiting lists, One Body LDN offers: 1. Straightforward private-health-insurance support - where we guide the client through exactly how to get cost-free sessions with our their health insurer and/or workplace health benefits (big one) 2. highly rated HCPC-registered clinicians, who give hands-on massage treatments in every session and 3. we offer same-day appointments

Social proof: Share 2–3 concrete outcomes you've achieved that we can reference in outreach.

Based on a structured analysis of 4,859 valid client survey responses collected between 1 January 2026 and 30 June 2026, clients reported a Net Promoter Score (NPS) of +79 - World class. (a figure sitting significantly above the private healthcare industry average of +30 to +50) <https://onebodyldn.com/about-us/client-testimonials> - this page is also being updated with case studies - which depending on who we target - we can reference multiple quotes and reviews from there

Describe Your Best Client

Ideal Client 1 – Corporate London Professionals Busy professionals who live in or commute into central London and work across industries such as finance, law, architecture, technology, consultancy and administration. They have private health insurance, workplace health benefits or sufficient disposable income to fund private physiotherapy, and value convenient clinic locations near their office, fast appointments, easy online booking and treatment that fits around work. They are typically experiencing pain or injury that affects their work, training or daily life and want expert, hands-on treatment with a clear recovery plan. Ideal Client 2 – Post-Operative Rehabilitation Clients People recovering from orthopaedic surgery who require structured, longer-term rehabilitation to restore movement, strength and confidence. They are motivated to follow a treatment programme, need regular sessions and continuity of care, and have private health insurance or the financial means to fund an extended rehabilitation pathway.

List 2–4 ideal personas we should reach out to. For each: job titles, company type/industry, size, region, quick description, exclusions.

1. Personas to approach for corporate partnerships
Persona 1: Head of People / HR Director / People Operations
Lead Company type: Finance, law, technology, consulting, architecture, accountancy, insurance, property and other professional-services firms
Company size: 50–500 UK employees
Region: Offices within approximately one mile of a One Body LDN clinic
Description: Owns employee wellbeing, retention, absence and benefits. The partnership gives employees a free physiotherapy assessment and creates a simple route into treatment through private health insurance or self-funding. Exclude: Fully remote companies, businesses without meaningful benefits or wellbeing budgets, and employers located too far from your clinics.
Persona 2: Employee Benefits / Reward / Wellbeing Manager
Job titles: Head of Reward, Benefits Manager, Employee Wellbeing Manager, Health and Wellbeing Lead, Total Rewards Manager
Company type: Larger professional and corporate employers with private medical insurance
Company size: 100–2,000 employees, with a substantial London office
Region: Central London and areas surrounding your clinics
Description: Directly manages private health insurance, wellbeing programmes and employee benefits. This is one of your strongest personas because they already understand PHI and can promote the offer internally. Exclude: Employers without private medical insurance, London offices with very few employees, and companies where all benefits decisions are controlled overseas.
Best initial target Prioritise: London companies with 75–500 employees, a central office near one of your clinics, and private medical insurance or a formal wellbeing programme. Companies below this size may not generate enough volume. Companies with thousands of employees can be valuable, but procurement, legal approval and vendor onboarding will usually be much slower.
2. Personas for direct client outreach
Persona 1: Insured Corporate Professional
Job titles: Solicitors, accountants, bankers, analysts, consultants, architects, project managers, software professionals, insurance professionals and corporate administrators
Industries: Law, finance, banking, insurance, accountancy, consulting, technology, architecture, property and professional services
Region: People commuting into central London offices near your clinics
Description: Busy, desk-based professionals experiencing back, neck, shoulder or other musculoskeletal pain. They have Bupa, AXA, WPA, Aviva, Vitality or another private health insurance benefit and value quick appointments close to work. Exclude: People without access to PHI or the means to self-fund, remote workers who rarely visit London, and contacts based far from your clinics.
Persona 2: High-Income Self-Funding Professional
Job titles: Partners, directors, senior managers, executives, founders, senior consultants and highly paid specialists
Industries: Finance, private equity, law, consulting, technology, property, media, advertising, architecture, pharmaceuticals and corporate healthcare
Region: Central London workers and affluent commuters
Description: Can afford private physiotherapy without insurance and values speed, convenience, professionalism, hands-on treatment and minimal disruption to work. Exclude: Low-income sectors, price-led prospects seeking the cheapest available service and people unlikely to commit to follow-up treatment.
Persona 3: Active Corporate Professional
Job titles: Professionals across finance, law, consulting, technology, media, property and creative industries
Description: Works in London but also runs, lifts weights, cycles, plays sport or attends gyms and fitness classes. They seek help for sports injuries, recurring pain or performance limitations and are likely to engage with rehabilitation when the plan connects to their training goals. Exclude: People looking solely for a low-cost massage, those unwilling to undertake rehabilitation and people without insurance or disposable income.
Persona 4: Post-Operative Rehabilitation Client
Job titles/industries: Any corporate or professional occupation
Description: Has undergone orthopaedic surgery—such as ACL reconstruction, rotator-cuff surgery, joint replacement, spinal surgery or fracture repair—and needs regular, longer-term rehabilitation. They have PHI or sufficient personal funds, are motivated to recover and offer greater lifetime value because treatment typically extends across multiple sessions. Exclude: Patients requiring rehabilitation outside your clinicians' competence, people without appropriate medical clearance, those unable to fund the necessary programme and cases better managed in specialist hospital rehabilitation.

Who should we NOT target? (block list)

We should not target: * Fully remote companies, predominantly field-based workforces, or businesses without a meaningful central London office presence. * Companies located too far from Central London for employees to attend conveniently. * Employers without private medical insurance, health cash plans, wellbeing benefits or a workforce likely to afford private physiotherapy. * Predominantly low-paid sectors such as hospitality, retail, warehousing, delivery, cleaning, security, care work and small construction trades, unless benefits have been confirmed. * NHS organisations, local authorities and other public-sector employers unless they have a funded wellbeing programme or relevant employee benefits. * Physiotherapy clinics, osteopathy or chiropractic practices, sports-massage providers, rehabilitation companies and other direct competitors. * Sole traders, microbusinesses and unincorporated businesses unless manually approved. * Existing corporate partners, companies already in active discussions with us, current suppliers and any company previously marked as not interested. * Existing patients, recent leads, unsubscribed contacts, previous opt-outs, complainants and anyone on our suppression list. * Personal email addresses, generic scraped contacts or employees who do not regularly work in London.

☰ What are your clients' main pain points — and how do you solve them?

For our direct offer to clients: 1. Pain or injury affecting work, exercise and daily life — We provide expert assessment, hands-on treatment and personalised rehabilitation to reduce symptoms and restore function. 2. Uncertainty about the problem and whether treatment will work — Our physiotherapists explain the likely cause, set realistic expectations and provide a clear recovery plan from the first appointment. 3. Long NHS waits or difficulty accessing treatment quickly — We offer same-week appointments, easy online booking and convenient clinics near major London workplaces. 4. Difficulty fitting treatment around a busy working schedule — Our multiple central London locations and extended opening hours make it easier to attend before, during or after work. 5. High private-treatment costs or confusing insurance processes — We accept major private health insurers and help clients activate and use their benefits; self-funding clients also have straightforward pricing options. 6. Need for structured rehabilitation after orthopaedic surgery — We provide progressive, longer-term rehabilitation focused on restoring movement, strength, confidence and return to normal activity. For when we are contacting companies to set up partnerships: Employee benefits can be expensive and difficult to justify — We give the entire workforce access to an initial physiotherapy session at no cost to the employer. HR teams want valuable benefits without extra administration — There are no contracts, fees or complicated integrations; we provide a simple code and ready-to-share materials for internal promotion. Musculoskeletal pain can affect productivity and absence — Employees can access assessment and treatment quickly at convenient London clinics before problems worsen. Employers need benefits that staff will genuinely use — Physiotherapy is practical, relevant and accessible to employees experiencing pain, injury or mobility issues. Companies want to strengthen their wellbeing and retention offering — The partnership adds a meaningful health benefit that can support employee satisfaction and complements existing private health insurance, without creating a long-term commitment.

☰ What “industry standard” do you disagree with? What do competitors get wrong?

We disagree with the industry's increasingly exercise-only approach to physiotherapy. Many clinics provide limited hands-on treatment, rely too heavily on generic exercise programmes or use sports therapists for treatment that should be delivered by qualified physiotherapists. At One Body LDN, every client is treated by an HCPC-registered physiotherapist, with lots of hands-on treatment combined with personalised rehabilitation. We also make private health insurance far easier to use by helping clients activate their cover, manage the process from start to finish and book insured appointments online - something many competitors do not offer, they make it hard to book and use health insurance.

☰ What are the top 3 reasons prospects say “no”? (objections)

Corporate partnerships 1. They just don't care enough to even answer or don't have time 2. Don't know us 3. Think we are trying to sell them something Prospect physio clients 1. Price/cost - we offer “in-clinic” cheaper booking rates when needed (if they need multiple sessions, they book with therapist and it's cheaper). Initial 25 min assessment is free or first 55 min treatment is half price. We heavily encourage them using their workplace benefits or private health insurance to get sessions cost free. 2. Don't even know what physio/massage is and if they even need it - have to run cold campaigns like this to try and get people to even consider using physio as most don't know what it is and that they should even need or use it. 3. Whether we are specialists or if they can trust us - we show our thousands of reviews.

☰ What are your key differentiators?

Hands-on, results-focused physiotherapy — We combine manual treatment with personalised rehabilitation rather than relying on generic exercise programmes alone. Only HCPC-registered physiotherapists — Every treatment is delivered by a qualified physiotherapist, not a sports therapist or unregulated practitioner. Private health insurance made easy — We help clients activate and use their cover from start to finish and allow insured appointments to be booked online. Convenient London access — Multiple central London clinics, extended opening hours and locations close to major offices make treatment easy to fit around work. Fast appointments and straightforward booking — Clients can access treatment quickly without long waiting lists or complicated referral processes. Trusted and highly rated — Thousands of positive reviews and a strong track record give clients confidence that they are choosing an experienced, reputable provider.

What’s your primary “hook” offer? (optional)

Corporate partnerships 1. Free 55 min physio and deep tissue massage treatment for their entire team of staff
Prospect physio clients 1. Free 55 min physio and deep tissue massage treatment

What CTAs should we use in the emails we send? (2–4 options)

Corporate partnerships 1. “Want me to send the code for your team to use?” 2. Or no CTA - but can just send code in initial email. Prospect physio clients 1. Book here today - and give link and code 2. “Want me to send the code for you to use?” - and then we send code in reply. In both instances - we want action and dont want back and forth with lots of questions. Potentailly the corporate partnership may want some further info. But for direct to clients, we want them to either book or not. Its not a high ticket item and we dont want to spend time answering someones concerns over booking a free session or not.
